

US

unrequested
services

Dear,

it is a pleasure to let you know that Unrequested Services is currently in your neighborhood.

Unrequested Services is a series of public services conceived by artists. They are unrequested because nobody commissioned or asked for them – if not the artists themselves, following their own desire and needs.

The service in your neighborhood has been happening for some weeks already in the park of Square Armand Steurs, close to the golden sculpture. It is an ongoing practice of attention, openness and aware, silent presence in public spaces.

The practice is repeated three days a week at different times, one hour per day, until October in the same place. It is conceived and realized/performed by artist and theater maker David Weber-Krebs.

The trigger of this practice is the phenomenon that one encounters when remaining still and silent in places, be they places in nature or public places in cities. In those cases, often happens that different creatures would approach human beings, for instance, without fear and without being called.

Giotto, Storie di San Francesco, Predica agli uccelli, ca. 1295

David develops a practice, still without name, that aims at opening up to his physical surroundings in the park, to and for the animals, human beings, plants, entities and unexpected events. He tries to connect without imposing his own presence.

After October, the practice will migrate to other neighborhoods of the city.

Maybe you will encounter David in the parc Armand Steurs in the next days. Feel welcome to approach him.

Maybe you want to know more about this or the other services. If so, please write to: simonebasani@rocketmail.com